BUILD. BE BOLD. BELONG.

Making Bryan Cave Leighton Paisner a diverse and inclusive firm is the responsibility of every lawyer and member of our team. We know that diversity enriches the quality and fabric of our culture and makes us a stronger, better firm. Being an inclusive firm where every individual can be themselves and contribute meaningfully to the firm's success is at the heart of who we are and how we do things as a firm.

COLLABORATING TO DRIVE DIVERSITY

At Bryan Cave Leighton Paisner (BCLP) we believe that diversity enriches the quality and fabric of our culture and makes us a stronger, better firm. We strive every day to create an inclusive workplace where every individual feels celebrated for their difference, can be themselves and can contribute meaningfully to the firm's success.

It has never felt more important to learn from and embrace the ideas, perspectives and experiences of others. In this spirit, we welcome the opportunity to collaborate with our clients on events and programmes aimed at improving access to the legal profession.

BCLP works in partnership with a range of early talent focused organisations and clients to conduct outreach activity aimed at young people and support diverse candidates interested in pursuing a career in law.

Entering the legal profession can be an especially daunting prospect for many, especially those with no connections, including individuals from a refugee or asylum seeker background; those who have been in local authority care, have caring responsibilities or are the first in their family to attend university.

WHAT PREVIOUS ATTENDEES HAVE SAID...

I loved how involved I felt with the work as well as the staff. Everyone was so welcoming and made me feel very comfortable to ask questions. I learnt a lot about the different types of law routes which made me very aware of how broad law can truly be. I am definitely considering law now!

I enjoyed all of my time on the programme. It was an outstanding opportunity which I loved every part of. If I really had to choose the highlight of my two weeks, I would either say the people I met or the work shadowing as the people were amazing and the work shadowing allowed me to gain invaluable insight into the career I am going into that I otherwise may not have been able to get.

Often times we see glamorised versions of the legal profession, such as arguing in court, however you never really get to see how normal the job can be. I think it's changed my perspective about it all and definitely in a positive way.

I enjoyed meeting clients as it gave me a better understanding of what my options are and the different aspects of law that affect everyday life.

TOP TIPS FOR APPLICATION

1. It isn't all about academics. We do expect successful applicants to have strong academic ability, but we are also looking for people with a well rounded personality, and demonstrating what you have done outside of school will help with this. We want to gain an insight into your character and other skills, such as resilience, determination, communication and team work.
2. Be accurate. Ensure your application is free from spelling and grammatical errors – attention to detail is a fundamental skill for any job in the City – so you are expected to exhibit this skill in your application. Get a teacher, friend or relative with a fresh pair of eyes to read over your application before submitting it.
3. What makes you stand out? What skills do you have that differentiate you from others? Competition for places is fierce, so think about any experiences or achievements that most students won't have in common with you.
4. Don't just list your skills and achievements, tell us why they are relevant and what you learned. Think about transferable skills. What skills will you need to succeed in the workplace? How have you displayed them? Work these skills into your application accordingly.
5. Follow the instructions and answer the questions that you are being asked. Do what is asked of you. Read the questions carefully to check you know exactly what you have to answer and you don't miss the point of the question. It may help to break down the question into sections so as to ensure you cover all elements. This should also provide some structure to your answer.
6. Ensure you provide detailed responses – you should aim to use the full word count. This is your opportunity to show us who you are and why you should be considered. One clear way to demonstrate your commitment and interest in the opportunity is to show you have spent time completing the application.
7. Do your research and show some interest in the organisation. Find out about recent client deals and developments, Inclusion & Diversity initiatives or pro bono projects, and try to include knowledge of this in the application.
8. Avoid using over-complicated words/phrases where a straight-forward, simple sentence would do the same job. Being able to write in a concise manner is a desirable skill.
9. Consider using the STARR method to help you answer any skills-based questions. These are the questions which ask for evidence of skills such as teamwork, organising, supervising or managing, problem solving, communicating, initiative and so on.

describe a situation

tell them what your task or role was say what action you took always mention the result; employers like results driven employees

sometimes it is appropriate to say that you reflected on what happened and decided how you would tackle the problem next time
